Many public evils are cured by martyrdom. The strength of the lottery element in Louisiana is a presage of its approaching overthrow.

By the split in the Democratic state convention, the people of Louisiana are to be treated to the novelty of a political contest. In the lottery of politics, may honesty win the prize.

The New Year's Gazette has always contained the only complete record of the building statistics of the year. The same pains usually taken to insure the completeness of the record will again be employed for the coming number and again we request the assistance of all who have been engaged in work of this kind at any time in the past year.

The settlement of the strike on the Atlantic and Pacific on the lines demanded by the operators is an admission of the fact already recognized by the public, that the strike was a just one. The restoration of the operators with increased pay and the recognition of their rights of union, is a victory for American manhood as well as for organized labor.

The east is suffering from an epidemic of railway accidents. Naturally the papers are beginning to ask if proper care is observed in construction and operation. The greatly increased speed of passenger trains, the much larger number of passengers carried, the immense increase in freight of all kinds are all good reasons for the use of the very best material, the adoption of the latest devices for safety, the employment of experienced and reliable men, and the use of the best methods of operation. It is natural to suppose in the face of such a remarkable series of accidents as have occurred in the present season that these necessary conditions have not been observed and there is a reasonable demand on the part of the traveling public that the arm of the law be invoked it necessary to enforce such laws as will secure their safety.

The board of directors of the National Conservatory of Music of America, 126 and 128 East Seventh street, New York, announce that the semi-annual entrance examinations take place as follows: Violin, violoncello, contrabass, harp, and all other orchestral instruments, January 4, 1892; piano and organ, January 5; voice, January 7 and 8; orchestra, January 4; chorus, January 6; operatic chorus, January 7. The National Conservatory of Music of America, unlike all other institutions of a kindred character, is the outcome of a disinterested endeavor to elevate the standard of taste in America by furnishing students with such thorough tuition in music as cannot be obtained elsewhere. No institution in the world is more completely equipped with teachers of the highest order; in none is the curriculum so comprehensive. From September next it will have the benefit of the guidance of Dr. Antonin Dvorak, the renowned composer. To heighten the efficiency of the institution as a factor in the musical advancement of this land by every possible means is the aim of its managers. Students are invited from all parts of the country; where marked natural talent is found, instruction is imparted free of expense, in other cases but a moderate fee, in no way commensurate with the quality of the instruction, is required. More copious information on all these points may be had on application to the secretary.

A prominent feature of the president's message was devoted to the new trade relations which have been built up under the present administration with the countries of Central and South America. The exhibit there made was a most gratifying one, and pleasing both to the national pride and the national pocketbook. But the exhibit contained in the report, just issued, of the Bureau of American Republics and by the news of the conclusion of the negotiations with the commissioners of the British West Indies for reciprocity treaties with those colonies. It is rather singular, by the way, that English merchants should be able to persuade Child to forego advantages which English statesmen do not dare to deny to their own colonies. The result of the negotiations with the other American countries has been most encouraging and with many of them a profitable trade has already been established. A large part of the credit is due to the Bureau of American Republics which was established soon after the Pan-American congress had been held in accordance with Secretary Blaine's suggestion. In catering for the South American trade the United States has three incontestable advantages: it is nearer, it makes better articles, and it offers a much better market in return. It is in spreading the knowledge of these facts that the Bureau of American Republics has been so helpful, and the facts once made known, the trade follows as a matter of course.

LITERARY NOTES.

Lovers of beautiful books will be interested in the announcement that the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad company is about to issue a large edition of an artistic souvenir folder for its fine great limited trains. The work is being printed by the American Bank Note company and will consist of twelve pages descriptive of the special features of each train, time schedule, equipment, etc. Mr. George H. Daniels, general passenger agent, has charge of the distribution of these artistic souvenirs of information relative to the popular [illegible] Limited.

WESTERN BREVITIES.

A number of men are prospecting for gold in an old volcanic crater near Glenwood Springs.

Eleven of the Eighth grade pupils in the Grand Junction school revolted and were suspended.

Creede mining camp, in the San Luis country, is to have a newspaper called The Amethyst.

The Boulder Camera says that that hamlet can have a $75,000 government building "for the asking."

Coasting on the steep hills of Glenwood Springs is occupying all the attention of the people of that lively town.

The Del Norte Prospector says that some prospectors who were looking for coal near there last week, struck a stratum of pure alum.

The state board of capitol managers are still undecided whether the new issue of Centennial bonds shall bear interest at 4 or 4½ per cent.

The following Colorado postmasters were appointed yesterday: N. M. Jackson at Salida, E. P. Mannix at Highlands, A. H. Wolf at Buena Vista and W. G. Connelly at Grand Junction.

The Contractor Would Not Resign.

Colonel Fisher tells a story which [illegible] Among the first railroads built in the United States was a little line [illegible] miles in length. In the [illegible] of the road, Tuttonia line was constructed through the same country. The original line became merely a branch. For many years it was run in a cheap way, with one locomotive, one engineer and two or three freight cars.

Finally a new general manager was appointed. He had been in the office but a week when he sent for the one lone conductor who had held the position ever since the road was built.

"I would like to have your resignation," said the general manager, when the conductor appeared.

"My resignation?" inquired the conductor in astonishment.

"Yes, sir; yours."

"What for, pray?"

"Well, I want to make some changes and get new blood in the line," was the general manager's reply.

"I won't resign," answered the conductor.

"Then I will be compelled to discharge you a step which for your sake I had hoped I would be saved from taking."

"Young man, you will not discharge me. I own a controlling interest in the stock of this railroad and elect the president and board of directors. I shall have you fired."

The old conductor did really own the majority of the stock, and, as he said, put in his own board of directors and president.—Atlanta Constitution.

An Ideal Studio.

In my experience there is nothing like a gondola to paint from, especially in the summer—and it is the summer time. Then all these Venetian cabs are gray in their sunshiny attire, and have laid aside their dark, hooded cloaks, their rainy day mackintoshes—their felsi—and have pulled over their shoulders a frail awning of creamy white, perched upon a delicate iron framework, with snowy curtains at sides and back, under which you paint in state or lounge luxuriously, drinking in the beauty about you.

I have in my wanderings tried all sorts of moving things to paint from: tartanes in Spain, volantes in Cuba, broad sailed lugers in Holland, mules in Mexico, and cabs everywhere. One I remember with delight—an old nighthawk in Amsterdam—that offered me not only its front seat for my easel, its arm rest for my water bottle, and a pocket in the door flap for brushes (I am likely to expect all these conveniences in even the most disreputable of cabs), but insisted on giving me the additional joy of a knot hole in its floor for waste water.

But with all this a cab is not a gondola.—F. Hopkinson Smith in Scribner's.

Only One on His Side.

A capital story is told of a well known judge who is noted for his fondness for conveying to jurors in his charges to them his own opinions with regard to the merits of the case. In one case he had done so with great plainness, but to his amazement the jury remained out for hours without coming to an agreement. The judge inquired of the bailiff what was the matter, and learned from him that one juror was holding out against the other eleven.

He sent for the jury at once, and stating to the jurors that he had plainly intimated how the case ought to be decided, said he understood the one juror was standing out against the other eleven. He proceeded to rebuke the juror sharply. The obstinate juror was a nervous little man, and as soon as the judge was done he rose and said:

"Mr. Judge, may I say a word?"

"Yes, sir," said the indignant judge; "what have you to say?"

"Well, what I wanted to say is, I am the only fellow that's on your side."—London Tit-Bits.

Was Columbus a Dago?

"I don't often laugh outright in the schoolroom," said a down town teacher the other day, "but I have to struggle hard to suppress an audible smile sometimes. For instance, I was instructing my class one day in the events just preceding the revolutionary war, and after I had read and explained the lesson I began to ask questions about it. I asked one boy to name one of the causes that led to the revolt of the colonies against Great Britain. 'Tea,' he answered. That was all right, so I said to another, a colored boy, by the way, 'Name another cause.' After a pause he replied, 'Coffee.'

"On the same day I gave my boys a short talk about Columbus, and then asked, 'Who can tell me the nationality of Columbus?' A half dozen hands were raised, and selecting one of my brightest scholars I told him to answer. Judge of my surprise when he said triumphantly, 'Dago.'"—Philadelphia Record.

Dogs May Talk Some Day.

Professor A. Graham Bell believes that dogs may be taught to pronounce words, and is now making scientific experiments in this direction. The same opinion was expressed two centuries ago by no less an authority than Leibnitz, who adduces some startling facts in support of it. The value of such a language as a means of enlarging our knowledge of the mental faculties of animals is [illegible]—Popular Science Monthly.

Dieting and the Complexion.

Sometimes a strictly vegetable and fruit diet, avoiding carefully all butter and fatty foods, will prove the complete cure when the most careful regimen in bathing and all the prescriptions of the physician are of no avail. Such dieting need be adhered to for only a few weeks and then one may go back gradually to ordinary diet, remembering however, that an abundance of rich pastries, cakes and sweetmeats, often produce only between meal times, will tend to ruin the very best complexion in the world.—Exchange.

The Reason.

"I hear that friend Onstay is going to get married."

"Indeed! Is he in love?"

"No—in debt."—Sodaige News.

A RUSSIAN SACRIFICE

A FATHER OFFERS UP HIS SON AS DID ABRAHAM OF OLD.

Not So Angel of the Lord Interfered to Save the Boy from a Terrible Death. Fanatical Deed of a Pious Hebrew. Pathetic Deathbed of the Child.

Toward the close of a day in late winter Dmitri Kurtin sat at the door of his log izba reading. He was a man of about fifty, tall, dark, concealed with narrow high forehead, piercing small eyes and compressed lips. The face of a fanatic or impostor, fearless, sometimes. By the fading afternoon light Kurtin sat with his book—an old Slavonic Bible inherited from his grandfather. It was the eve of Sabbath and he was reading the history of the ancient patriarch pacing and pondering, reading and praying. He had read and re-read the terrible story of Abraham's unquestioning sacrifice of his son, and the old Hebrew felt secretly somehow to possess a strange fascination for him, filling his mind with awful thoughts that would come surging to upon him, he knew not whence.

He explained afterwards that in thought of the wickedness of the world and the utter hopelessness of salvation coming to men had been for a long time weighing him down with grief. That all men must perish because of their impurity and distance from God was made clear for weeks he had been taking firmer hold of him. What could he do to prevent the inevitable doom that was to fall on mankind? Filled with this notion he sat and read the old story of Abraham and Isaac, and the awful thought entered his mind that he and his wife and son would be eternally lost unless they found some means of satisfying divine justice. "Jehovah jireh, Jehovah jireh," he would mutter to himself, "in the mount thou of the Lord it shall be provided."

He would reason with himself: "If the Lord asked me to offer up Grisha to prove me, would I be found wanting? O Lord, don't prove me, he is my only son, little Grisha. But shouldst thou have it so, it will be grand to hear thy voice saying: 'Because thou hast obeyed my voice, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son Grisha, that in blessing I will bless thee and make thy faith an example to the nations and accept thy sacrifice to the blessing of the nations of the earth.'"

THE INSPIRATION.

The correspondent translates a portion of the statement made by Kurtin some few days after this to the examining magistrate of the town of Vladimir. "When it became too dark to read I entered my izba and went to bed, but during the night my sorrow so increased upon me that I could not sleep, and several times I rose to fight more and yet more candles before the holy icon. During the greater part of the night I prayed on my knees for my own and my family's salvation, all the time the thought growing stronger and stronger within my breast that little Grisha must be sacrificed.

"He was a sprightly, joyful child, and clever beyond his years—such wise things he would say sometimes. If I sacrificed him I would thereby save him from the temptations of life from the temptation, when he grew up, of forsaking the faith and making a shipwreck of his soul. I concluded to prepare for him a sure path to heaven. Early in the morning, long before daylight broke upon the world, I went out into the dark, to the garden behind the izba, knelt down and asked the Redeemer for a sign.

"I asked that if it be his will that I offer up my Grisha, the desire to do so should come from the right side, if not, from the left. You must know that, according to our belief, angels give all thoughts from the right side and the devils all from the left. After long praying the thought came from the right side, and I returned with a joyful heart to the izba, for I now knew that my sacrifice would be acceptable."

THE SACRIFICE.

On a broad bench in the inner room Grisha slept with his mother, a gentle woman, loving her son passionately and admiring his precocious wisdom. Kurtin, fearing opposition from his wife, sent her on some pretext to the neighboring village. Then, turning to his son, he said, "Rise, Grisha, and put on a white shirt, that I may rejoice over thee." Kurtin afterwards explained to the examining magistrate that in the society to which he belonged it was considered sinful to die in striped or colored clothes.

When the boy had put on the white shirt he was told by his father to lie down again on the bench. Kurtin folded up a fur coat and carefully placed it under his son's head; then sitting down beside him he drew a knife from his sleeve and stabbed him several times. The child was sinking fast as the red dawn grew brighter and brighter in the eastern heavens, sending level beams through the little window of the izba, and luridly illuminating this terrible fanatic in the execution of his awful deed.

Kurtin noticed the crimson light stealing athwart the ghastly face of the faultless sacrifice. He was awe stricken, trembled convulsively, and, tottering to the corner where the icon hung, he fell prostrate on his face and implored the Almighty to accept his offering. Then, returning to his still living son, he cried, "Forgive me, Grishenka, that I have made thee suffer. It is vile for thy father's boy."

The dying child, not yet unconscious, murmured, "Goodby, little father." But Kurtin, not yet satisfied, placed the boy in an easier position, and made him say, "God will pardon thee, little father."

DEATH OF THE FATHER.

Then he fingered fresh candles before the icon and prayed for the soul of the boy one of those pathetic Russian prayers for the dying, asking the child to try to repeat the words after him. The poor little fellow did so as well as his trembling voice would allow, and quavering out the last word of the prayer his terrible sufferings ended.

When Kurtin's wife returned home she saw at a glance what had happened. Horror stricken, she ran to the village elders. The neighbors flocked to the scene of the fearful tragedy and found the murderer lying senseless before the icon.

About a fortnight afterward the governor of the state jail of Vladimir invited the doctor and the chief warden to a consultation on the state of a prisoner confined in the lunatic ward, who had refused for days to take any food, and who passed his days and nights in agonizing cries for forgiveness and help. They went to see the prisoner. Opening the door of the cell in which he was confined, they saw through the imperfect light a shapeless bundle, huddled close up to the wall, motionless. But all suffering had ceased. It was the body of Dmitri Kurtin, starved to death.—Christian World.

POSTHUMOUS FAME.

It Came to William Douglas O'Connor as It Did to Theodore Winthrop.

Special Correspondence.

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—It is one of the ironies of posthumous fame that William Douglas O'Connor is greater to-day than he ever dreamed he would be. He is perhaps least so far as the public is concerned, and it is certainly true that the conditions which Mr. O'Connor wrote—"The Brazen Android," "The Carpenter," "The Brazen Serpent," etc.—are published in The Atlantic Monthly, and it is safe to say that more of his work than of any other American author's is being read. Many articles which have appeared in the magazines of recent years attracted the attention of the reading public.

As [illegible] was regarded as [illegible] Mr. O'Connor's work was [illegible] Drummond Lodge, which was [illegible] a good deal of [illegible] Spring, the author. When it was discovered that the story was a posthumous work there was [illegible] Mr. O'Connor's death had ceased [illegible] stories published in this book, which bears the unpretending title of "Three Tales," Mr. O'Connor died in Washington some two years ago, and while this little book will serve to perpetuate his fame, yet those who knew him [illegible] remained, perhaps, more highly on account of his intense interest in all humanitarian work. He was a philanthropist at heart and he made philanthropy, to some extent, his life business. That absorbed his literary quality. Had Mr. O'Connor given to literature what he gave in the cause of good works he would probably be as well known as any American writer of fiction of his generation.

Between Mr. O'Connor and Walt Whitman there existed a very close intimacy which had been continued for more than thirty years and perhaps the last literary work which Walt Whitman will do is the preface which he has written for this book, and in which he speaks in the highest terms of Mr. O'Connor's character and ability.

O'Connor was a cousin of Theodore Winthrop and his works and life lend suggestion that the same literary fame which is now thrust upon which seems certain to be attached to the name of Mr. O'Connor. The publishers say that there has of late spring up a new demand for the novels of Winthrop, especially for that delightful short story entitled "Love on Skates," for "Cecil Dreeme" and "John Brent." The dramatic power of "Love on Skates," which was recognized by every one who ever read the story, was overlooked by the dramatists, but recently the motive and some of the incidents and features suggested much that went to make one of the latest successes of the American drama.

Living in Washington, coming to New York in 1860 or 1861, and being one of the most new and striking writers Curtis at the time was, so much so that he gave up the editorship of his Easy Chair to Mr. O'Connor for a time, and that he would rank among writers of American fiction.

When the war broke out Winthrop was one of the first to enlist. He held a subordinate commission in the Seventh New York regiment, and which that body of soldiers which contained some of the brightest and best of the young men of New York—marched down Broadway, Winthrop was thought to be the handsomest man in the regiment. A group of his literary friends, including George William Curtis, Park Godwin, William Cullen Bryant and the poet Halleck, stood on a balcony of one of the building and waved him an adieu, and the last they ever saw of him alive was when, with a smile upon his face, he returned their salute.

The Seventh regiment was stationed in Washington in a field near what is now the residence of Mrs. John A. Logan, and having some leisure Winthrop began writing some letters descriptive of camp life for one of the New York newspapers. They attracted slight attention then, but on account of the brilliancy of the descriptions and because they were the first real newspaper correspondence from the front. When Winthrop's regiment went to Fortress Monroe to join General Butler's command, the young officer was delighted, believing that he would soon see some fighting, but little dreaming of the fate which was in store for him.

In what was practically the first skirmish in Virginia, at a place called Big Bethel, Winthrop was killed, and the manner of his death was so dramatic, and the fact that he was the only officer killed in that skirmish, and with Colonel Ellsworth was one of the first two officers to fall, gave him instant fame. His body was brought back to New York, and the death of Winthrop became the topic of the nation. His novels were then edited by Mr. Curtis and published, and commanded at once a very great cash, and then the nation saw that in Winthrop's death it had not only lost a most gallant soldier, but one who would have been, had he lived, one of the most distinguished of American literateurs. Winthrop's novels have become what Mr. O'Connor predicted of them, American classics.

The Home of John Burroughs.

WEST PARK, N. Y., Dec. 14.—Mr. John Burroughs lives here on a fine country place, fifteen acres of which are devoted to fruit. Outside of his house he has a small square sided cabin covered with the bark of trees. In this he has his library and desk and there does his literary work. In the summer he devotes himself to outdoor affairs, lending a hand to all the culture upon his place.

In the winter he does the bulk of his literary work. He has orders from many editors, to some of which he does not respond, preferring to stand by those magazines and periodicals which employed him first. He was born in Roxbury, Delaware county, N. Y., was a schoolmate of Jay Gould and is intensely fond of country life. In fact he hates the city and society is rather irksome to him. He is fonder of the birds and bees which throng about his cabin and live in his yard. He is about fifty-five years of age.

THE GAZETTE.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 17, 1891

Ashby, the jeweler, is ready for the Christmas trade, and has a handsome display.

Mr. L. S. Cornell, traveling representative of the Denver Republican, was a visitor in the city yesterday.

There will be Swedish service held in City hall this evening at 8 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Johnson of Pueblo, Colo.

County assessor E. G. Perkins was at his office yesterday for the first time for some weeks, having recovered from his recent illness.

Surveyor Durfee came down from Cripple Creek yesterday and reported a large amount of snow lying in the mountains.

On account of the union revival services there will be no meeting of the Union Bible class at the Y. M. C. A. rooms this evening.

We call attention this morning to the change in Aiken's ad. The big curiosity store offers a splendid field for the selection of novel Christmas presents.

The office of the Denver and Rio Grande express will remain open evenings until 9 o'clock until Christmas evening for the accommodation of its patrons.

Pike's Peak commandery No. 6 K. T. meets to-night at 7:30 o'clock in stated conclave. Installation of officers and other work to which visiting Sir Knights are cordially invited.

County treasurer McCreery is sending out Christmas cards this week. They will not be appreciated as much as some will that are now passing through the mails. Pay your taxes early, for you can pay them twice this year.

El Paso lodge No. 13, A. F. & A. M., will meet in special communication on Friday evening, Dec. 18th, for installation of officers. All Master Masons, their wives, widows, sisters and daughters are invited to attend.

Thomas Hamilton, the fellow caught stealing a coat from Davis' undertaking rooms, was arraigned in Justice Walker's court yesterday on a charge of larceny and burglary. He plead guilty to burglary and was sent to jail in default of $400 bail.

The Ladies Missionary society of the First Presbyterian church will have a social tea to-morrow afternoon, at 3 o'clock, at the residence of Mrs. John Curr, 426 North Tejon street. A native Syrian woman, dressed in the costume of her country, will address the ladies.

The county commissioners yesterday settled up with the Bullen Iron Bridge company for the three bridges built for the county during the past summer. Two of the bridges are over Dirty Water creek north of town and one is in the Ute Pass. The price for the three was $1,181.

Mr. C. G. Burkhardt, traveling passenger agent of the Chicago and Northwestern railway, was in the city yesterday mailing business for his road and distributing calendars for '92. Mr. Burkhardt was very much surprised at the size and equipment of THE GAZETTE job department.

There has been so much talk of dolls and doll fairs of late that the Consolidated Stationery company has gotten up a doll fair of its own. Everyone can have a doll now, for the firm has decided to present a doll to every child whose parents cannot afford to get it one. Call and see them at half the price.

At the meeting of the Sons of Veterans last Monday evening the following officers were elected for the coming year: Captain, B. G. Robbins; first lieutenant, W. H. Jones; second lieutenant, C. N. Wheeler, camp guard, C. F. Van Why, Chas. Milhone, and W. S. Hoyt, delegate, W. S. Hoyt; alternate, Guy E. Smith.

The ball given by the Jackson hose boys last evening for the benefit of sick [illegible] was very much of a success, [illegible] of twenty numbers to the music of Brown's orchestra and enjoyed the evening immensely. A large number of tickets had been sold to friends of the department who were not present and a very neat sum will be realized.

Dr. Beverly Tucker, son of Dr. B. St. George Tucker, returned to the city yesterday from New York city and will remain permanently to practice medicine as an assistant to his father. Dr. Tucker has been in the east and south for the past five years preparing himself in the science of medicine and surgery, and is a graduate of the medical department of the University of Virginia. For the past [illegible] he has been at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York city, and a physician in the infants' hospital on Randall's Island.

Mr. Cooper, of Topeka, Kan., tax agent of the Rock Island railroad was in the city yesterday looking up the assessment of the road in this county. Mr. Cooper states that he finds the levy for state purposes is over four mills, the maximum levy permitted by the constitution. He will report the matter to the legal department of the road but does not know whether they will contest it or not. It seems that the Ute Pass debt and other outstanding indebtedness of the state required an extra assessment of nineteen thirtieths of a mill. Some of the officials in other counties refused to extend the levy to cover this amount as being unconstitutional, but County-clerk Howbert, acting under advice, did so. There is considerable difference of opinion in the matter among the attorneys.

Mr. John Livezey, manager of the Chronicle mine at Pitkin Colo., was in the city yesterday arranging for the sale of some of the stock of the company. He has made Mr. W. J. Fosters office headquarters for the company here and hopes to dispose of about $25,000 worth, that amount having been disposed of in Pueblo. Mr. Livezey states that the Chronicle is a silver mine and that it is shipping ore which is paying $60 per ton. He displays some very handsome specimens of wire silver. The shaft has been sunk to the depth of 300 feet and $50,000 worth of the treasury stock is to be sold for development. The officers of the company are largely Pueblo men, Mr. Platt Weeks being the president, G. R. Bierdsdeller vice president, and Frank Lingner secretary. Mr. Livezey is going to Cripple Creek to take a look around.

The Railroad Not Idle.

The Denver Times last evening printed the article given below without giving its source of information. No one can doubt but that the great mountain roads will soon have to turn their attention to the new camp, and it is to be hoped the Times has straight tips. The article is as follows

"The railway companies are now paying a deal of attention to the Cripple Creek country, and if the good name of the camp continues, before many more months have passed by, dirt will be flying on one or more lines hurrying construction to the new camp.

The Rio Grande had an agent in the Cripple Creek country last week, and the Colorado Midland company has made two surveys, and has caused estimates to be made for the construction of a branch into that camp.

The surveys made by the Midland were made from Summit Park and from Elbert. The distance from Summit Park is but fourteen miles, and cost of construction will be but $[illegible]. The distance from Elbert is nineteen miles but the company seems to be of the opinion that the Summit Park route is the one that will be adopted. The company has an expert representative in the Cripple Creek country now watching developments and obtaining estimates as to the probable outcome of the developments now going on.

The Denver and Rio Grande will survey a line from Canon City if it is decided advisable to build to the new camp, and the distance will be about thirty miles.

The Union Pacific, too, it is claimed, will come in for a share of the traffic if the camp pans out well, by constructing a branch from its South Park line, though it will have farther to build than the other lines. One thing that impresses the Midland people very much is that all who visit the camp pronounce it good, and many say it is the coming camp of the state. There are now about 2,000 people in there and developments are being pushed rapidly, and there seems no doubt but what there will be a demand for a railway.

"Dr. Bill."

The laughing comedy success, "Dr. Bill," to be produced at the opera house Thursday evening will be preceded by a pretty little curtain-raiser called "Sunset," the work of Jerome K. Jerome. The Boston Herald in speaking of "Dr. Bill" says: "One of the most fashionable audiences of the season was present in the Hollis Street theater last evening to witness 'Sunset' and 'Dr. Bill,' two pleasing plays which have delighted metropolitan audiences for several months. The house was crowded in every part, and judging by the manner in which the plays and players were received, the same pleasing condition of affairs will continue during the engagement here, which is for one week only. Jerome's 'Sunset,' which opens the bill, is a very pretty piece. Two half-sisters love the same man, and one sacrifices herself to save the feelings of the other. That is the plot, told in a pleasing manner, with a very effective blending of pathos and humor. The interest in the piece mainly centers in the noble girl whose love for her sister is so great as to be capable of self-sacrifice. 'Dr. Bill' is a rollicking, jolly farce, in three acts. Its story has been told in these columns and need not be repeated. It is brightly written and its complications, its incidents, and its situations are funny at all times. It went with a near last evening and the audience must have become weary with laughter long before the curtain fell."

A Railroad Arbitration.

At Leadville last week Auditor E. W. Sells and Superintendent W. J. Lawrence of the Midland road, met Grand Chief Conductor E. E. Clark and Mr. Slattery of the Trainmen's organization, to adjust a grievance of the employes of the road. The difficulty was over the payment of wages to brakemen. It seems that railroads pay brakemen a certain percentage of the wages paid conductors, and on the Midland some of the brakemen received about 60 per cent., others more, others less. A committee from the trainmen met the officers and they selected the Congregational minister at Leadville as the arbitrator. After a session of five days' duration it was agreed that the brakemen should be paid at the rate of 75 per cent of the wages paid conductors

Mr. Sayford's Services.

The interest in the evangelistic services now being conducted in the First Congregational church by Rev. Mr. Sayford seems to be increasing, and the attendance last evening was much the largest that at any previous meeting. The sermon was an exposition of the Thirty-second Psalm and treated of the successive steps of the Christian experience conviction confession forgiveness protection, prayer and joy. A brief after meeting was held. There will be services to-night and to-morrow night but none on Saturday. The good impression which Mr. Sayford made on his first appearance is increasing.

Articles of incorporation of the "B. V. Mining company," were filed with the recorder yesterday. This is the company which will develope the Buena Vista lode at Cripple Creek, and is organized for the general purpose of mining. The capital stock is $70,000 and James Pourtales, Duncan Chisholm, W. H. Sanford, J. Arthur Connell and T. C. Parrish are the directors for the first year.

A Paris Candle Story.

"Every traveler who stops at a Paris lodging house," laughed a woman the other day, "has a candle story, and here is mine: We were served with two candles every morning, which we never half used up; these would be taken out, however, and fresh ones appear in their places. Knowing that we were being charged for every candle we determined at least to enjoy added illumination, and my husband looked around for a place to hide them during the daily doing up of the apartment. On the top shelf of a cabinet arrangement in a corner stood a large Japanese vase, wide and deep. Up to this Mr. climbed, to discover that we had been forestalled, for in its capacious hollow we found seventeen candles, every one burned down perhaps an inch.

"Some former lodger had resented the candle swindle like ourselves, and had put his daily allowance where it would do the proprietor no good. That night a brilliant illumination of nineteen candles, each set in its own grease on the marble top table, gave us something like light. During our stay we hid and accumulated candles, so that we had always enough to read by, and when we left we deposited our overstock in the vase for the benefit of some searching successor."—New York Times.

The Religions of China

The three great religions of China are Confucianism, Buddhism and Taouism. The bulk of the people are Buddhists rather than Confucianists, and there are millions of infidels. The tomb of Confucius is at Mecca, for many of the Chinese, and they make pilgrimages to it. Confucianism is more a philosophy than a religion. It contains many of the beauties which we suppose to be exclusively the properties of Christianity. The golden rule in a negative form was announced by Confucius, and as a system of morality it is beautiful. The Taoists have more superstitions than the Confucianists. They began about the same time as Confucius, their preacher being one Laon-Tsze.

The state religion, in connection with which all these religions coming in, is the worship of the emperor, who is the son of heaven and the prophet, priest and king of the people. He worships for them in the temples at Pekin. When the great Temple of Heaven was burned down a shudder ran down the 300,000,000 spines of the great Chinese nation. It was thought that this was a warning from heaven that the emperor should be deposed.—Frank G. Carpenter in National Tribune.

The Dear Old Soul.

Miss St. Cyr was talking to old Lady Goldfoil about her heart affairs, and during the course of her conversation she said:

"Even your own son Harold, Mrs. Goldfoil, was a quondam lover of mine."

The old lady almost bounced out of her chair, but laughed it off, and when she had gone to her room she spoke to her husband.

"Well," she said, indignantly, "there may be some excuse for fashionable young women talking about their various sweethearts, but profanity is utterly unpardonable."—Detroit Free Press.

QUEER BUSINESS, THIS.

HOW A PAWNBROKER MANAGES TO MAKE A LIVING.

His Method Is to Attend a Pawnbrokers' Sale, Buy Goods, Then Redeem Them, and Afterward Lend the Tickets Among His Friends On Pay a Work.

Dobson is a [illegible] broker. Did you ever [illegible] before? There are of [illegible] kind of brokers. [illegible] good fool [illegible] since New York. But who ever [illegible] of a man who deals in [illegible]

That man [illegible]

He said [illegible] the other day, with a shrewd [illegible] that "business would soon [illegible]

"Dobson," I replied, "is the very mark of honesty [illegible] in our dealings your friends say [illegible] with every [illegible] and [illegible] you."

"With pleasure," said the little man, "come right along with me. I am on the track of a [illegible] deal."

We went over to a pawnbroker's place in the Bowery where a sale of forfeited goods had been announced, the pawns to be offered without reserve.

There were a dozen Jews in the room. The sale had begun before we arrived. It was the usual unloading of the thousand and one effects left in an everyday pawnshop. The auctioneer offered several watches, the cheap up-country kind.

Dobson examined the ring with his little magnifying glass and then cautiously bid three dollars.

"Five," said a voice in the corner.

"Five twenty-five," repeated Dobson.

"Seventy five."

"Six."

"Six twenty."

"Take it, Mr. Dobson," said the auctioneer.

Then the broker sold us two gold watches at ten dollars each and a cheap diamond for two dollars more. A rickety basket was then offered.

Some one bid forty cents. Dobson made it fifty, then sixty, then seventy five, then one dollar, then a quarter more, then a half, then three quarters and

And Mr. Dobson shrewdly dropped out, for, as he said afterward, some one was only leading him on in the interest of the house.

In half an hour Mr. Dobson, the broker had invested about fifty dollars, and in turn had received four watches, two rings, a gold brooch, three razors, a pair of second-hand trousers, a rusty set of surgical instruments and a violin.

Mr. Dobson then withdrew from the sale.

Later in the day he attended another foreclosure sale and purchased five more watches, three rings, two gold chains, a marine glass, a razor strop and a set of boxing gloves and foils. He packed all his goods in two satchels and started for home, as it was now too late to do any business that day.

Bright and early next morning I went by appointment to Mr. Dobson's room and assisting him with one of the satchels, we started out. Mr. Dobson to ply his strange calling. We trudged along over toward the Bowery.

"What will you give me for this fine hunting case watch, Felix?" asked Mr. Dobson of a pawnbroker friend near Chatham square.

"What do you want on it?" he asked.

"Thirty dollars."

"I'll give you twelve."

"Take it."

Felix made out a check for the watch.

Dobson offered Felix two rings and a chain, and after some bargaining the deal was made.

In each case tickets were given.

We then passed on to half a dozen pawnshops. In one we sold the dress suit for seven dollars, the boxing gloves and foils went for two dollars more and two more rings were disposed of at $5.40. Tickets were obtained in each instance.

In the next half hour we had sold three more watches, the marine glass, the razors, the clothes and all that remained was the set of surgical instruments. These proved difficult to dispose of to any advantage, but finally Mr. Dobson let them pass at a close sacrifice.

Mr. Dobson, his goods all placed, disposed of the two satchels at a fair figure, and was now ready for his business proper as a broker in pawn tickets. He eyed them narrowly, wondering how much profit there was in them.

We counted over the tickets and found that they were sixteen in number and aggregated seventy-five dollars, face value.

It was now about 6 o'clock. "Come with me," said Mr. Dobson, leading the way into a tenement in Hester street.

"What for?"

"I have a customer up here."

"Jake," said Mr. Dobson to a young man up stairs, "are you still going with Hannah?"

"Why?"

"Well, it's nearly time that you bought her a present. Do you want a chance?"

"Have you a bargain, Mr. Dobson?"

"Look at this. Here is a ticket for a lady's gold watch, twelve carats fine, good machine movement, enameled case, stem winder. I saw the watch myself. It is a beauty. This ticket will redeem it for seven dollars. You can get it for the bargain, Jake, and you can make Hannah happy."

Jake hesitated.

"It's only ten dollars, and I tell you it is a real bargain."

The deal was closed, and Mr. Dobson and I went away.

Next the pawn ticket broker led me to a saloon where he was known. There was a large crowd sitting at the tables. Mr. Dobson was gone about half an hour, during which time I saw him offer tickets after ticket, here and there, to the men at the tables, all the while explaining in a low tone the value of his goods.

When we went out he had sold five tickets, making something on each, the net profit being $7.50.

As we passed along, the genial broker never missed his opportunity to greet a friend and offer tickets. In an hour he had sold two more.

Then business became somewhat depressed. In the next two hours only one ticket was sold.

Mr. Dobson then visited in quick succession half a dozen saloons where he was known favorably.

By 11 o'clock that night he had disposed of the entire sixteen tickets at a profit of $21.50. I could not but marvel.

"It is a phase of human nature," said the shrewd broker, "to try to get something for nothing. Each man is after a big bargain and is willing to pay a dollar or two more to secure the coveted opportunity. Add amounts over and above full values are of course my commissions."

"You live in this way?"

"Yes, live well, year by year."—New York World.

Worshiping Medicine Bottles.

"An eminent lady missionary in Burmah recently gave Dr. A. J. Gordon an instructive but somewhat startling chapter from her experience. In one of her tours, she said, she came upon a village where cholera was raging. Having with her a quantity of a famous painkiller she went from house to house administering the remedy to the invalids and left a number of bottles to be used after she had gone. Returning to the village some months after, the missionary was met by the head man of the community, who cheered and delighted her by this intelligence: "Teacher, we have come over to your side. The medicine did us so much good that we have accepted your God."

Overjoyed at this news, she was conducted to the house of her informant, who, opening a room, showed her the painkiller bottles solemnly arranged in a row upon a shelf, and before them the whole company immediately prostrated themselves in worship.—Modern Church.

A WINTER IN THE SOUTH

A winter in the South, the very words conjure up delicious memories for those who have been there. The bracing air, the dry freezing air and the warm sunshine, are as devoid of contrast to the cold block North.

The great state of Texas is celebrated as a great broad winter resort, while the following places are, perhaps, particularly popular: Fort Worth, with its mineral baths, healthful climate and good hotels. Austin, the beautiful Capital City. San Antonio, one of the few really historical places in our country. Houston, with its blooming roses, oleanders and orange groves, and Galveston, and Galveston, with its delicious sea breezes. These are but a few of the delightful resorts of this highly favored region.

An escape from all the pains and discomforts of our rigorous winter, transported by magic from the region of snow and ice to the fragrance of this summer land, is now made possible and easy by the Denver, Texas & Ft. Worth Branch of the Union Pacific System, which runs through Pullman Palace Sleepers between Denver, Ft. Worth, Dallas, Shreveport and New Orleans, and offers exceedingly low excursion rates to all Southern cities from Denver, Pueblo, Colorado Springs and Trinidad. For a full description of Southern winter resorts, reached over the Union Pacific System, or for excursion rates, apply to W. G. Rice, Union Pacific Ticket agent, office 16 Pike's Peak avenue, for a copy of the Union Pacific Winter Tours Folder.

BEAUTIFUL OKLAHOMA.

The exciting incidents of the two great invasions of Oklahoma territory by home seekers April 22, 1889 and September 22, 1891, have given that section the most prominence as a place in which to cheaply obtain one of Uncle Sam's farms. The lands recently opened are located in the Old Iowa, Sac and Fox and Pottawattomie reservations, lying directly east of Guthrie and Oklahoma City, on the A. T. & S. F. R. R. They now constitute counties "A" and "B" with Chandler and Tecumseh as respective county seats—both large and rapidly growing towns. Claims can be bought at reasonable figures. For the raising of corn, cotton, wheat and fruit, Oklahoma is unexcelled.

Write to G. T. Nicholson, G. P. & T. A., Topeka, Kan., or J. P. Hall, Colorado Pass. Agent, Denver, Colorado, for a specially prepared folder giving full information relative to Beautiful Oklahoma.

BELLEVUE SANITARIUM.

THE GAZETTE

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 17, 1891

Ashby, the jeweler, is ready for the Christmas trade, and has a handsome display.

Mr. L. S. Cornell, traveling representative of the Denver Republican, was a visitor in the city yesterday

There will be Swedish service held in City hall this evening at 8 o'clock, conducted by Rev Johnson of Pueblo, Colo

County assessor E G Perkins was at his office yesterday for the first time for some weeks, having recovered from his recent illness.

Surveyor Durfee came down from Cripple Creek yesterday and reports a large amount of snow lying in the mountains.

On account of the union revival services there will be no meeting of the Union Bible class at the Y. M C A. rooms this evening

We call attention this morning to the change in Aiken's ad. The big curiosity store offers a splendid field for the selection of novel Christmas presents

The office of the Denver and Rio Grande express will remain open evenings until 9 o'clock until Christmas evening for the accommodation of its patrons.

Pike's Peak commandery No. 6 K T meets to-night at 7 30 o'clock in stated conclave Installation of officers and other work to which visiting Sir Knights are cordially invited.

County treasurer McCreery is sending out Christmas cards this week. They will not be appreciated as much as some will that are now passing through the mails Pay your taxes early, for you can pay them twice this year

El Paso Lodge No. 13, A. F. & A. M., will meet in special communication on Friday evening, Dec. 18th, for installation of officers. All Master Masons, their wives, widows, sisters and daughters are invited to attend.

Thomas Hamilton, the fellow caught stealing a coat from Davis' undertaking rooms, was arraigned in Justice Walker's court yesterday on a charge of larceny and burglary. He plead guilty to burglary and was sent to jail in default of $400 bail

The Ladies Missionary society of the First Presbyterian church will have a social hour tea to-morrow afternoon, at 3 o'clock, at the residence of Mrs. John Curr, 426 North Tejon street. A native Syrian woman, dressed in the costume of her country, will address the ladies.

The county commissioners yesterday settled up with the Bullen Iron Bridge company for the three bridges built for the county during the past summer Two of the bridges are over Dirty Water creek north of town and one is in the Ute Pass The price for the three was $1,181.

Mr. C. G Burkhardt, traveling passenger agent of the Chicago and Northwestern railway, was in the city yesterday mailing business for his road and distributing calendars for '92. Mr. Burkhardt was very much surprised at the size and equipment of THE GAZETTE job department.

There has been so much talk of dolls and doll fairs of late that the Consolidated Stationery company has gotten up a doll fair of its own. Everyone can have a doll now, for the firm has decided to present a body to every child whose parents cannot afford to get it one, Christmas enough at half the price.

At the meeting of the Sons of Veterans last Monday evening the following officers were elected for the coming year: Captain, B G. Robbins; first lieutenant, W. H Jones; second lieutenant C. N. Wheeler, camp guard, C. F. Van Way, Chas. Wilhone, and W. S. Hoyt, delegate, W. S. Hoyt; alternate, Guy E. Smith

The ball given by the Jackson hose boys last evening for the benefit of sick member, was very much of a success there being about [illegible] of twenty numbers to the music of Brown' orchestra and enjoyed the evening immensely. A large number of tickets had been sold to friends of the department who were not present and a very neat sum will be realized.

Dr. Beverly Tucker, son of Dr B St George Tucker, returned to the city yesterday from New York city and will remain permanently to practice medicine as an assistant to his father. Dr Tucker has been in the east and south for the past five years preparing himself in the science of medicine and surgery, and is a graduate of the medical department of the University of Virginia. For the past year he has been at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York city, and a physician in the infants' hospital on Randall's Island

Mr Cooper, of Topeka, Kan tax agent of the Rock Island railroad was in the city yesterday looking up the assessment of the road in this county Mr Cooper states that he finds the levy for state purposes is over four mills, the maximum levy permitted by the constitution. He will report the matter to the legal department of the road but does not know whether they will contest it or not. It seems that the Ute pass debt and other outstanding indebtedness of the state required an extra assessment of nineteen thirtieths of a mill Some of the officials in other counties refused to extend the levy to cover this amount as being unconstitutional, but County-clerk Howbert, acting under advice, did so. There is considerable difference of opinion in the matter among the attorneys.

Mr. John Lirezey manager of the Chronicle mine at Pitkin Colo was in the city yesterday arranging for the sale of some of the stock of the company. He has made Mr W J Fosters office headquarters for the company here and hopes to dispose of about $25,000 worth that amount having been disposed of in Pueblo. Mr. Lirezey states that the Chronicle is a silver mine and that it is shipping ore which is paying $60 per ton He displays some very handsome specimens of wire silver The shaft has been sunk to the depth of 300 feet and $50,000 worth of the treasury stock is to be sold for development. The officers of the company are largely Pueblo men, Mr Platt Weeks being the president, G R Bierdsdeller vice president, and Frank Lingnor secretary. Mr. Lirezey is going to Cripple Creek to take a look around.
